

For the team

Everything you can do, and where to look for it

This is everything on the bot that is yours to use. If a command is not on this sheet, it is somebody else's job — you will not be missing anything by not knowing it.

If you only remember three

/go

What is waiting on you right now. Run it first.

/desk me

Your work, deadlines and pay in one place.

/find

When you half-remember a name or a code and cannot recall the command.

Where things show up

The staff info board channel

One message per department, listing who is in it, what each person has on, and their local time. The bot edits these in place and refreshes them on a timer — they are never re-posted, so the channel stays clean.

Read-only. Nobody types anything here.

Your DMs

Task offers with Accept and Decline buttons, pay decisions, deadline reminders, and anything that needs you personally.

If your DMs are closed the bot posts it to the private staff channel instead, so it is never silently lost. Open your DMs to this server.

/desk me

Everything of yours in one place: offers waiting, what you hold, deadlines, and your pay. This is the one to run each morning.

Private to you — only you see the reply.

Nowhere public

Progress notes, submissions and reviews are not posted to a channel. /my-work progress replies to you privately and sends your leader a DM; your leader's decision comes back the same way.

So there is no "progress" channel to watch, and nothing you do lands in front of the whole server.

Your browser

/desk web-link gives you a one-time link to the same desk in a browser, read-only.

The link expires. Ask for a new one whenever you need it.

Worth knowing

Open your DMs to this server

Task offers arrive by DM. With DMs closed they go to the private staff channel instead, which is slower and easier to miss.

Set your timezone once

/profile timezone. Without it your deadlines are read as UTC and land hours out.

Say when you are away

/profile availability with a return date. It stops work being offered to you while you are gone.
